Mini-Documentary Project

Purpose

This project is to consider how digital film tools allow you to curate and narrate the stories of religious communities. Narrative structures invite different types of questions on curation and editing, and ethical engagement, than more static representations.

Project breakdown

1. Proposal/Outline - 5 points - Due October 22
   The proposal should be between 200-300 words that describes what your narrative is, why your site selections support that narrative, and what you think a viewer may understand better about religion through your story.
2. Mini-Doc - 5 points - Due November 12
   Your doc should offer a clear narrative of the site(s)/religion you are exploring. The Media Center team will provide feedback on this section to the teaching staff.
3. Evaluation - 5 points - Due November 12
   The evaluation should be a 350-400 word reflection on the process. You should include any thoughts you have about the appropriateness of your site selections in delivering your narrative and/or learning objectives; the selection of tools; any learnings about religion or your communities of interest.
